AN INTERGENERATIONAL HOUSING FOR YOUNG ADULTS AND SENIOR CITIZENS

IDENTITY AWARENESS

Housing two different generations, young and old, can improve the lives of both. Inter-generational building is what gives meaning to solidarity and mutual aid in architecture. The mixed-age interaction between young adults and the elderly is a social achievement as these two generations are considered as the loneliest groups in society.

STRENGTH OF TRADITION

To support the needs of particularly the elders, the main proposed building is being accompanied by a health center.

SOCIAL COHESION

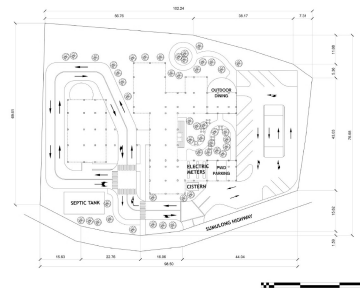

For the benefit of the two generations, activity areas where both coexist are being provided to develop their relationship, grow old, and live as social beings. The combination of the needs of both and establishing into one is a good opportunity to live and grow with dignity.

Approximately 6,400sqm site in Antipala along Sumulong Highway offers views and comfort for the elders, while also being located near the city which young adults benefit for as they are working citizens.
